RE: Form handles pojo within a pojo
That's an awesome tip. I have built a Form using an overridden DefaultFieldFactory, but hadn't considered putting a Form inside a Form, so presumably the property "address" would return a Form that would then list the properties to be used in that sub-Form...

Table: ItemClickListener difference between 6.3.0 & 6.4.5 ? 13.10.2010, 12:00AM

posted an hour ago

Hi all,
This simple code was working without any error with 6.3.0.

01 this.tbl.addListener(new ItemClickListener() {
02     @Override
03     public void itemClick(ItemClickEvent event) {
04         Item item = event.getItem();
05     }
06 });

but since i upgraded to 6.4.5 i have this error:

01 java.lang.ArrayIndexOutOfBoundsException: 8
02     at com.vaadin.terminal.gwt.client.MouseEventDetails.deserialize(MouseEventDetails.java:124)
03     at com.vaadin.ui.Table.handleClickEvent(Table.java:2142)
04     at com.vaadin.ui.Table.changeVariables(Table.java:1963)

Table: ItemClickListener difference between 6.3.0 & 6.4.5 ?

Hi all,
This simple code was working without any error with 6.3.0.

01 this.tbl.addListener(new ItemClickListener() {
02     @Override
03     public void itemClick(ItemClickEvent event) {
04         Item item = event.getItem();
05     }
06 });

but since i upgraded to 6.4.5 i have this error:

01 java.lang.ArrayIndexOutOfBoundsException: 8
02     at com.vaadin.terminal.gwt.client.MouseEventDetails.deserialize(MouseEventDetails.java:124)
03     at com.vaadin.ui.Table.handleClickEvent(Table.java:2142)

Both the input and the preview areas expand upwards as more lines are being written. It will, however, expand only to a certain height, after which both will start to scroll. The scroll of the two fields is synchronized.

The idea of the Drawer is to hide infrequently used information, while keeping it at hands at all times. My particular use case is to provide past events other information that might be occasionally interesting, but I don't want them to clutter the UI by default. GWT has a very similar component by the name DisclosurePanel. Unfortunately, I couldn't rig it to work with Vaadin directly, so I decided to write my own from scratch.

A live demo can, as usual, be found at <http://henrik.virtuallypreinstalled.com/Drawer>, and the sources are available in <http://dev.vaadin.com/browser/incubator/Drawer/incubator SVN>. As promised, there's also a ready-made <http://dev.vaadin.com/export/9730/incubator/Drawer/drawer-1.0.jar>, for your convenience.

Is there a way to catch doubleclick event in table?
I have a Window with Table and when user doubleclicks one row in table I would like to select that row and close the Window. I already have select event and close button, but doubleclick would be "faster" way to do that.

Great!
Thank you very much.
Method `isDoubleClick()` in event helps to separate singleclick from doubleclick.

Hi,
Adding an ItemClickListener to Table (`addListener(ItemClickListener)`) should do the trick.
It's a quite new feature, and if I remember correctly, there is still one peculiarity that has not been fixed: when the user doubleclicks, you first get a single-click event, then a double-click event. This is not good, and should be fixed (if it has not been already, I'm not 100% sure), but it should not affect your case - just something to be aware of...

Hot Stuff Explanation

Hot Stuff is a fuzzy algorithm that aims to suggest interesting threads and posts to the user. There are several factors that come into play:

Your preferences: The likes and dislikes you configure in your settings area will promote and demote (respectively) posts into (or out of) the the Hot Stuff list.

Community activity: If a certain thread gets a sudden spike of views or replies, this indicates Hot Stuff.

Moderator influence: Some threads will contain generally useful information that the forum moderators deem useful or interesting to most or all forum readers, regardless of their personal preferences, or community activity.

STASH

Thigs are stashed for posterity, and are not part of the official collection.

Ideas for future versions:

- Shoutbox kind-of-thing that dual functions as a live feed for notifications on new threads and posts and also as a lightweight chat platform, where people can promote their posts and also chit-chat about whatever. See Chat-wireframes for references.

Highlights

The things you write are highlighted a bit. Similarly, if someone writes to you, your name in the reply is highlighted.

Sending Your Line

You can either press the "Send" button, or you can just press enter.

Replying

Replying in the chat threads is done by prepending the line with the user's screen name and a colon symbol. Choosing the "Reply to this" option will do this for you.

Editing Posts

Only moderators are allowed to edit any post willy-nilly. Normal users may edit their own posts within a certain time-frame (in the order of a minute after posting).
